Two Types of Trade Signals

FX Einstein app offers two types of Forex trade signals: Grid Signals and Straight Signals. Grid Signals include four trades with individual entry and take-profit levels but a shared stop-loss, helping traders maximize profits in all market conditions. Straight Signals provide a single trade signal with entry, take-profit, and stop-loss levels, ideal for those seeking short-term opportunities.

- Grid Signals
- Straight Signals

Grid Signals

FX Einstein Grid Signals are the best way to distribute the trades at four different market levels. The trade distribution at four different levels helps the traders to minimize the risk and maximize the profit.

Straight Signals

FX Einstein Straight Signals are best used to benefit from the current market opportunity. Whether it is Forex, Commodities or Indices the app will give you a precise entry, take profit and stop-loss level.

FX Einstein Lot Size Calculator

Risk management is crucial in the Forex and commodity markets. Properly adjusting trade size based on trading capital and style is key, but it can be challenging with market analysis distractions. To simplify this, the FX Einstein app offers an advanced Lot Size Calculator, which helps calculate the exact lot size based on your risk management criteria.

By entering your trading capital and selecting a trading style (Conservative, Moderate, or Aggressive), the calculator automatically determines the lot size. It stands out from other calculators by factoring in the current volatility of the selected instrument, ensuring the calculated lot size aligns with market conditions to properly manage risk.
